Nixon adviser admits alarm

Following in the footsteps of Alvin Toffler, Charles W. Williams Jr. yesterday warned an audience of Canadian Club members that forty years from now will "bring about a future for which none of you here will want to be held accountable."

Williams, who is research director of the President's Committee on Management Improvement said that unless we use the alternatives now available to us, coming generations will face a bleak future.

Williams enumerated four main areas in which "decisions" need to be taken soon:

The first is world ecology. Business must take decisions now to create a liveable environment since it is in a position to do so. Williams also commented on the Amchitka nuclear test: "My President realizes now that it will never again be easy to make a decision similar to the Amchitka one." The fact that this apology came about two weeks late did not seem to bother him.

Agilely skipping to the subject of physiological simulation, Williams said that in a short period of time, "we will be able to understand and manipulate the emotions of man."

While admitting that his conception sounded Orwellian, he claimed that there would be advantages since man would be more predictable and logical in his decision-making.

Referring to cybernetic technology, Williams maintained that newer and improved techniques will result in the dismissal of about 70 percent of the present work force. He said that this was no cause for alarm, but failed to say why.

Williams' repertoire also included "social acceptability", specifically marriage. He proposed annual marriage contracts which would include a clause to allow each partner to annul the marriage.

Williams suggested that this concept could be utilized in other group relationships. However, he warned against using the principle without a set of rules "to allow for responsible decisions."

"If you take the right decisions now, the future generations will honor you for posterity, as having provided for a future free of difficulty."

SOCIOLOGY PROFESSOR MARLENE DIXON faces possible dismissal at the end of this year. A special committee of the Sociology Department will meet tonight to evaluate her academic and teaching qualifications.

Sociology department to fire Dixon?

A special committee of the Sociology Department will meet tonight to discuss the possible firing of assistant professor Marlene Dixon.

Although the committee has convened several times in recent weeks to evaluate Dixon's "teaching, writing, and contributions to the administrative work of the department", tonight will be the first time that she has been asked to appear before it.

Procedures for renewal of contract, outlined last year, stipulate that this personal appearance is necessary when "the committee feels that it is moving towards a doubtful or an unfavourable evaluation."

A "doubtful" evaluation means that Dixon's contract would be renewed for one or two years; an "unfavourable" evaluation will result in her dismissal at the end of the year.

The ten-man committee is composed of Dixon's fellow faculty members who are senior to her in rank or time, Dr. D. Solomon, Chairman of Sociology, and two department members of Dixon's choice. These are Professor Emmanuel Wallerstein and Philip Ehrensaft.

Dixon is preparing a response to the committee's charges, to be presented at tonight's meeting.

In a written brief presented to Dixon two weeks ago as "a correct representation of the committee's thinking to that point", the committee stated that "one major complaint was that classes were characterized as harangues."

The brief also claimed that some students had been victims of "arbitrary and biased grading".

However, the committee conceded that other students "felt she offered fresh analytical insights" and that she was "very responsive" to them.

The committee concluded that "it was not possible to reach a definitive judgement on teaching performance, given the range and variety of reports received."

The committee also seems unable to reach agreement of an evaluation of Dixon's published work. While the majority of the committee "characterized the work as adding very little, if anything, to knowledge", some members felt that Dixon's recent work "combined with her active participation in social movements gave her original insights and offered the potential for important intellectual contributions."

Similarly, there was a split over Dixon's contribution to the administration of the department.

The written brief charged that "there was minimal involvement in departmental meetings and committee work."

Yet the report went on to say that "the rest of the department by their attitudes and behaviour may have contributed to the genesis of this behavior."

While the controversy within the committee may forestall any final decision, it will not prevent the inevitable choice from being made, for even though the committee is supposed to "operate by consensus rather than voting", provisions have been made to end "long and serious deliberation" by a majority vote.

Solomon refused to comment on anything relating to the Dixon case.

"I wouldn't like to talk about it at all," he said.

J. Edgar vs. the Red Menace

BOSTON (LNS) The past few weeks residents of Boston's Chinatown have been reading a new notice taped to the walls of buildings near Oxford and Beech Streets, an area where many Chinese gather. The notice is on eight-and-one-half by eleven inch paper, in black Chinese characters, with a phone number in red, and contains the English letters: FBI.

A translation reads: "FBI NOTICE: Now that you permanently reside in the United States you not only enjoy the democratic system guaranteed by this country, but you are also called upon to shoulder the responsibility of protecting the heritage of liberty."

"You have fully experienced the bondage and suffering inflicted by a Communist regime and therefore you must be well aware of the value and importance of liberty and the terror of Communism."

"In the United States, the Communists continually engage in secretive activities, attempting to disrupt our traditional liberty. The FBI has always been on the alert and you can cooperate in this task of anti-Communism by paying heed to the following things:

■ "If you happen to know of any Communist or Maoist agents trying to spy, to disrupt, or to infiltrate, please call the local FBI branch as soon as possible. (The phone number of the FBI local branch is often listed on the first two or three pages of your phone directory.)

■ "You must report only facts,

not rumors and hearsay.

■ "You must report only what you know and should not attempt to investigate, for investigation should be undertaken by experts. Any investigation by ordinary people is not only dangerous to the individual concerned but also will forewarn those people held suspect."

"For any information or correspondence, please notify our local branch. The phone number is 742-5533."

Hoover, Director of FBI"

To check the authenticity of the notice, I called the number printed in red. "FBI," said the receptionist and directed my question to a man who identified himself as agent Crawford.

"Has the FBI been posting notices in Chinatown?" I asked.

"I'm not familiar with any posters in Chinatown," agent Crawford replied cautiously. "What did they say?"

"They said to report any information about Communist agents to the FBI."

"Have you got any?" he asked quickly.

"No, I just wanted to see if the notice was really from the FBI."

He asked questions until I had described the notice in detail, and then he said he would check to see if the FBI had written it. Thirty minutes later he called me.

"I checked with the agent responsible for Chinese affairs," he said. "We wrote it. Our agent contacted some Chinese organization and gave them a small flyer on how to cooperate with the FBI. They had it printed to a larger size."

"What was the name of the organization?" I asked.

"The benevolent something," he replied. (The Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Society is a conservative group in Chinatown. Most of its members are elderly, speak only Chinese, and many have ties to the Kuomintang party of Chiang Kai-shek.)

"Do you have anything to report?" agent Crawford asked me again, noticeably puzzled as to why I had called.

"No," I said, and thanked him for the information.

Boston's Chinatown is not the only Chinese community where notices apparently written by the FBI have appeared. They were first reported along the streets of Chinatown in San Francisco.

Several weeks ago, the Chinese language China Tribune of New York City published an article about the FBI undertaking "extraordinary actions" by using "Chinese circulars to exhort all overseas Chinese and Americans of Chinese descent to watch out for Communist activities, disruption, and infiltration of Maoist agents."

Even to the editors of the China Tribune, who warned their readers at the end of the article not to "meddle with Communists," Hoover's intensified hunt for Communists seemed extraordinary.

Fred and Wilma too?

WASHINGTON (LNS) The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has launched a public service campaign aimed at bolstering public trust and confidence in the American free enterprise system.

Hanna-Barbara Productions in Hollywood has produced 30 and 60 second animated colored cartoon spots for the Chamber with the themes:

- Freedom of choice by the individual under the free enterprise system.
- Why the consumer is boss of the economy
- The importance and need of profits

The TV spots and a series of radio spots on the same theme will be distributed to stations throughout the country.

However, a recent Harris poll indicates that the advertising campaign may not be an overwhelming success. The American public's faith in advertising has dropped to an all time low — 13 percent from a not so whopping 21 percent last year.
